

A WAITER FIGHT.

He Was Struck Over the Head With a "Pot."

Yesterday afternoon, a sad-looking individual with his head carefully bandaged and blood on the linen of which the bandage was made, crawled into the city court-room and asked to see the "man who fixes the papers to arrest people." Deputy District Attorney Chelf introduced himself and stated that he attended to such matters in that court, and to him, the man, who stated his name was Henri Manga, told a long history of his persecution at the hands of a fellow waiter at the Nadeau House. His story was as follows:

"This morning as I was waiting on the table at lunch time, one of the waiters, whose name is Frank Hayden, commenced to abuse me. I was very busy at the time and told him that I had done nothing to be abused for and wanted him to let me do my work without interference. I then went out into the pantry and attended to my business taking food into the dining-room in answer to orders given to me by the guests. When I came out again with an empty tray in my hand, Hayden met me again and told me that I had said something about him that was not true. I said such a thing was not in accordance with the facts and he at once called me a liar. Then I told him he must not call me a liar and put my tray down, ready to defend myself, when without saying anything else he hit me over the head with a pot."

"What do you mean by that," said Mr. Chelf. "What kind of a pot was it he struck you with? Was it an iron pot?"

"No, sir, it was a tin pot, and he struck me so hard that he knocked me down and made a cut in my head, from which the blood ran so badly that I had to get the doctor to sew it up. I was knocked so hard that I was insensible for a little while, and Dr. Robbins said that if he had struck me a little lower on the head he might have killed me."

The blow was evidently a viciously delivered one, and made two cuts through the scalp, one of them about an inch in length. Manga was told that before a complaint could be sworn out against him that he would have to bring one or two witnesses up to testify as to whether he was in fault at the time the blow was struck. This Manga demurred to on account, he said, that the only witnesses were three of the pantry girls, and he would not like to have them brought into court on account of such a quarrel. Mr. Chelf explained that they had made out so many complaints and when the men were brought into court failed to hold them, that it was now a rule of the office that any person wanting a complaint must prove that he had just grounds for its being issued.

The wounded waiter then went off in search of his fair witnesses, but as he did not return again during the afternoon it is probable that they either would not testify in favor of Manga or did not have time to attend court.

THE WICKED N.C.B.

No Sign of a Boom—Bold Gamblers at Sacramento.

Constant Ed Spruce, the veteran afternoon returned from a three weeks' vacation spent in traveling through the N.C.B. The big Constable states that he had a good deal of time while he was away, but in spite of his most earnest efforts spent in shadowing every doubtful appearing unknown object he happened upon, he failed to catch the slightest view of the reported boom in that part of the State. Once he felt sure he had run it to earth, and was about to shake hands with himself over the fact, when, to his great disappointment, he saw it go under the canvas of a sideshow in the Sacramento State Fair, and soon reappear before the curtain as the "Great and Only Living Skeleton."

Speaking of Sacramento during the fair, Ed says that he was never in a town where more public wickedness was allowed full swing. On all the sidewalks there were gambling devices of the simplest and most alluring character, such as chuck-a-luck, the shell game, roulette, rouge-et-noir, and just inside the hotel doors, so as to enable patrons of the game to stand on the sidewalk and "jack the tiger," were any number of faro games of the lowest order. The bunco stealer was there in all his native beauty, and if ever Vanity Fair was held on earth it could not compare with the week of the Sacramento State Fair.

While away he had also the rather doubtful pleasure of seeing the execution of the murderer Kernaghan, being in the jailyard where the execution took place, as an eyewitness. Ed says he has seen other hangings at various places, but in no instance was there so much grit displayed as that shown by Kernaghan. He not only walked on the scaffold with a firm, unflinching step, but when the Deputy Sheriffs essayed to pinion him, he assisted them to the extent of his ability, by holding out his arms and feet when the rope was bound about his ankles. The black cap was adjusted with the utmost care, and when the trap was sprung his neck was broken and he was dead without a struggle inside of two minutes.

Ed was also telling his friends last evening how he visited the murderer Goldenstein, the man who killed Maggie Kelly, describing him as an arrant coward and the exact counterpart to the murderer whose last hours he had previously witnessed. Goldenstein sits in his cell gloowering at all his visitors, sometimes weeping when he reflects that his crime will be expiated on the gallows.

The Highest Authority.

William Hammond Hall, the State Engineer, who has had years of experience in land and water in California, after a full examination of the Rancho Ex-Mew-on of San Fernando, reports to the owners of the property, the Porter Land and Water Company, as follows: "You have 10,000 to 11,000 acres, and perhaps more, of really first-rate valley lands for cultivation, with soils not to be surpassed for fertility and desirability by those of any section; lying very favorably for irrigation, and in a neighborhood whose climate is well-adapted to the best class of agricultural, horticultural and vineyard productions usual in this country."

Mr. Hall has been employed by the company to devise a complete plan for the irrigation of the tract with the waters flowing from San Fernando, Sycamore and Pacoima creeks, and from the immense cienegas located upon the ranch, and the public may expect the finest water system in California upon this property. Office, room No. 9, Los Angeles National Bank building, corner First and Spring streets. A man always at San Fernando, with conveyance, to show the property.

POINTS OF THE MORNING'S NEWS.

The Grand Army parade at St. Louis. Gen. Fairchild's annual address at opening of National Encampment. Result of the Hawaiian election. Justice Field's criticism of Judge H. S. G. on the Hawaiian election. Massachusetts Republican State Convention nominates ticket and adopts platform. The Pacific M. E. Conference in session at San Francisco. Courtney defeats Buear. New York Democratic State Convention in session. Another version of the shooting at the Hawaiian Islands. German frontier. Conflict of authority between military and civil in Arizona. A woman murdered near Heidelberg. Mrs. Colton makes a statement regarding her husband's correspondence with Huntington. Gov. Bartlett's will filed. Strong evidence against ex-Senator Creighton. A woman sentenced at San Francisco for corrupting children. The new San Joaquin Valley road to be a rival line. Events on the race track. Gov. Waterman will not interfere in the case of Lee Sane Ho. Santa Barbara County Fair opened. Appointments by Gov. Wain's dissenting opinion. The homicide at Antelope. Six of Eskimuzin's band held for trial. Yesterday's baseball game. A British steamer wrecked. Strong Chinese opposition to the proposed Chinese-American bank.

The latest railroad cry is on to Salt Lake and the Mormons.
 The Massachusetts Republican State Convention convened yesterday in Boston.

An interesting review of the advantages of Santa Ana and the progress which that booming place has made in the past two years appears elsewhere in today's Times.

OLIVER A. AMES was nominated for Governor yesterday by the Massachusetts Republicans. There was no competitor, and the nomination was made by acclamation.

The grand procession of veterans took place yesterday notwithstanding the muddy streets and the downpour of rain. Gen. Sherman was in line, and was heartily greeted.

In the New York Democratic State Convention, the seats of New York City have been evenly divided between Tammany Hall and the County Democracy. All other factions, including Irving Hall, are left out in the cold. But then, the camp of the Georgettes is open to them.

In his suit, pending in Judge O'Melveny's court, against the California Southern Railroad, E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin comes out on top. He was yesterday awarded $7749.90. This is one of many suits resulting from crops being burned by fire supposed to be lighted by locomotive sparks.

MRS. COLTON accuses C. P. Huntington of falsehood in that Huntington stated, before the Railroad Commission, that the famous Colton letters were surreptitiously removed from the Central Pacific Railroad headquarters, and that agents of Mrs. Colton had offered to sell them to him.

The contract for building a railroad into the San Jacinto Valley by the California Central Railroad Company has been signed. The grading will be commenced on Monday. J. A. Green, James Kerr and H. C. Ashenfelter signed for the people of San Jacinto, and F. T. Ferris for the California Central. The people of San Jacinto deserve credit for the manner in which they stuck to the Santa Fe folks till they had the contract signed. This valley will now get the boom which its great resources merit.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to THE TIMES to ask whether we cannot suggest some plan for furnishing temporary accommodations for the horde of people who are pouring in from the East and who are sorely put to it to find shelter. Our correspondent thereupon adopts the role of a suggester himself, and wonders whether something in the shape of barracks would not be quickly and cheaply constructed to accommodate such as are unable to find more pretentious quarters. We are afraid the barracks scheme wouldn't work. The better class of people coming here would stick their noses at barracks, and an undesirable class would secure passage on fifth-class (brake-beam) tickets would like them all too well. The best plan is to have some sort of immigration bureau established and utilize such private houses as might be thrown open, together with the hotels and boarding houses.

Another Lightning Calculation.

The fantastic fiddler of the morning Trombone has again fingered out some weird Wagnerian editorial music to confuse and bewilder his long-suffering readers. Read the ponderous result: "The delegation from Southern, and indeed from all California, seems to be pretty well united, though at one time, before their arrival at St. Louis, an attempt was speciously made to entrap the majority, and use them for factional ends. It was a little bomb that was laid; but it was deftly picked up and tossed well aside, after which nothing occurred to disturb the harmony of the delegation or mar the general pleasure. The little bomb was charged with Presidential powder, and it was intended that its explosion should sound for a certain candidate for President who had been General for his brother. Not one in the delegation had any objection to this candidate, or anything but admiration for the General. So far all was satisfactory enough. But a blundering partisan from THE TIMES, of this city, attempted to play it off on the Grand Army boys and commit them to a political programme."

The result of this last lightning calculation presents such an equal compound of imbecility and falsehood that it is rendered wholly harmless by reason of the fact that no English speaking person can understand it. It is impossible for the average reader to decide what the deuce the Trombone calculator is driving at, or what he desires to drive at, other than an overstrained anxiety to invent some excuse that would permit him to make a grimace at THE TIMES.

"The delegates from Southern, and indeed from all California, seem to be pretty well united." Well, who the San Hill said they were not? "A little bomb was laid—it was deftly picked up and tossed well aside—after which nothing occurred to disturb the harmony of the delegation or mar the general pleasure." Who has heard of any inharmonious among the delegates en route to St. Louis? Has the Trombone been dreaming, or drinking?

"The little bomb was charged with Presidential powder, and it was intended that its explosion should sound for a certain candidate for President who has a great General for his brother." What a tootsy-tootsy bit of baby composition. "No one in the delegation had any objection to this candidate or anything but admiration for the General." Then, you dear little tootsy-trotter, where did the "marring of the general pleasure" and the "inharmonious" come in? "But a blundering partisan from THE TIMES of this city attempted to play it off on the Grand Army boys and commit them to a political programme."

The motive and inspiration of the Trombone's editorial (God save the mark) is contained in the last sentence, and the statement made therein is as false and groundless as the balance of the article is vapid and unintelligible.

In all probability the Trombone refers to the vote on Gen. Sherman for Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., taken while the California delegation was en route for St. Louis. Now, it is difficult to see wherein that vote for Gen. Sherman committed the California Grand Army to the General's brother, or where it would in any manner affect, pro or con, the Presidential aspirations of John Sherman. If in any manner that vote would exert the character of influence sneakingly suggested by the Trombone, then the Trombone snivels too late, for the vote was taken and it was unanimous. And if, as the Trombone hesitatingly hints, John Sherman should become President because a representative of THE TIMES prompted that vote, then we say, long life to that representative and more power to his elbow.

The Salvationists.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 29.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] The people seem to be all fighting against the Salvation Army, and walking around on the street with drums, horns, etc., singing religious songs. Or, which is the more degrading and harmful to mankind, the noise of the Salvation Army on Sunday night or the loud voice of the male who brays away on Spring street, and the only American mummy ever exhumed? Why, the Salvation Army are princes by the side of this howling discord, and they are trying to do good in the world to do their good unpersecuted, while they bend all their strength to suppress such nuisances as the sidewalk, the saloon and other institutions of vice, this city of Los Angeles would be far worthier of the name it bears. Again, which does the more harm and makes the more noise, the Salvation Army or the street-walkers who congregate in front of the Temple block nightly and draw people into buying their worthless patent medicines, etc.? Has it got to give full possession of the streets? Let us have law on our streets, and let the streets be clean and order be established in an unprejudiced manner. Let justice be dealt out to all.

There seems to be an effort on the part of some of the "unco good" to place the Salvation Army in the attitude of martyrs. But they are not injured innocents. They are allowed to parade the streets by day and night with their uniforms, their hideous horns and bass drums, their tambourines and all the ridiculous paraphernalia that they can devise. Nobody says them in the least; nobody interferes with them in any way, unless it be an occasional gang of hoodlums, whom their outlandish demonstrations attract and invite to pranks and demonstrations. It is probably because the authorities refuse to make martyrs of them that the so-called Salvationists are eating their nails with chagrin.

People of serious religious convictions would do well to let this riff-raff who are trailing the sacred banner of religion in the gutter severely alone. They cannot do the cause any good with their ill-advised and clownish methods, while they must surely do a great deal of harm in shocking the sensibilities of those who have real veneration in their hearts.

Enough has already transpired in the public courts to show of what material these people are composed. One of the women was recently arrested for cruelly neglecting her children. She left them in squalor and hunger. She cared of themselves, while she remained out with the army, or one of its elect, until the small hours of the morning. If this is the way they exemplify the religion of Jesus Christ, they are not worthy representatives. It is a matter of note that some of the big loafers who parade the streets at night bubbling over with religious ardor, do it as a mere "lark," or as a makeshift to obtain an easy living. One of the number who had been drawing regular pay at $7 a week recently struck and betook himself to type-setting because he could make more money at it.

No, these people are not worthy to be made martyrs of, and the severest punishment that can be meted out to them is to ignore them.

The Massachusetts Republican Platform.

The platform of the Massachusetts Republicans, which was unanimously adopted by the State convention, is a clear, concise and comprehensive document. On the tariff question it speaks boldly for protection, and demands a reduction of the internal revenue. It asks Congress to carefully consider the tariff on sugar, and to improve the administration of Custom-house laws. It condemns the suppression of the Republican vote in the Southern States and election frauds in Northern cities. It demands further extension of the National civil laws. It arraigns President Cleveland for the array of shameful dismissals and disgraceful appointments, and for indorsing the spoils machine in Maryland and elsewhere. It declares the Democratic party in Massachusetts stands with that party throughout the country in support of the doctrine "to the victors belong the spoils." It demands the restoration of compulsory coinage of silver.

It asks for the passage of a National tariff act, and protection to the fishery interests without a yielding of rights. It demands the continued enactment of progressive temperance measures, and favors the submission to a vote of the people of a prohibition amendment to the Constitution. The temperance plank is a good one; and the proposition to submit to a vote of the people a prohibition amendment to the State Constitution will strike all fair-minded men and all honest temperance folk as an honest endeavor to ascertain and measure popular sentiment on the prohibition issue.

Now is the time for the prohibitionists to prove the truth of their oft-repeated assertions that the populace are with them. If the Massachusetts prohibitionists leaders are not mere political brokers they will stand with the Republican party of their State in this instance. If the reference of the prohibition to the people proves, by the triumph of the Republican party, that the people of Massachusetts are so strongly in favor of prohibition action that they are willing to add a prohibition amendment to the organic law of their State, that certainly would solve the problem as far as the State of Massachusetts is concerned, and solve it in no doubtful manner.

AMUSEMENTS.

A very fashionable audience packed the opera-house last night to see Mr. Boucicault as "Conn, the Shaughraun." It is so old and has been played so many times, that the play itself would be stale, while the same fun, energy and life he ever gave it. The pungent humor, the ever-recurring acts of chivalry and pluck called for continuous applause. He plays "Conn" from his very heart, and the enjoyment of his audience is manifest. He is exceptionally clever. He has shown talent before during the present engagement, but last night he was at his best. He could work, he did so and was strong through. Miss Thornyke was a very charming "Alice," and Miss Minnie Young's "Moya," a dainty bit of acting. Harry Marshall did better work as "Harvey" than anything he has essayed, and the rest of the cast was acceptably good. The play was finely set and mounted, and to judge by the enthusiasm expressed, and the number of people who were away from their homes to see it, it is a triumph of the play itself, and a triumph of the management.

Forbidden Fruit is an alluring name in itself, and has succeeded in filling many a theater for a week. It is a play about the country. Mr. Boucicault has recently added it to his repertoire, and with his present company, drew crowded houses for a week. It is a play about the country, and is a connected thread of the story, so many are interwoven in carrying out the plot that the whole is a masterpiece of dramatic construction. It is a play about the country, and is a connected thread of the story, so many are interwoven in carrying out the plot that the whole is a masterpiece of dramatic construction.

Operating of the Santa Barbara Fair—Sport at Stockton—Fate of a Family—Band of Durango.

By Telegram to THE TIMES. SANTA FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—[By the Associated Press.] E. Wilbur, president of the new San Joaquin Valley Railroad, speaking of the Associated Press dispatch from Bakersfield in regard to the construction of the new road from Mojave to Bakersfield, said that the section mentioned would form a part of the new road. He said: "The road will extend west easterly to Tejon Pass, and then north easterly to the Tehachapi route, and from the pass northerly to near Bakersfield. I cannot give the exact projected route to the north at present, for it would be of advantage to the Southern Pacific, which is opposing us at every point. I can say that we will build our road. The cost of the enterprise was carefully considered before the work began. The road is a private enterprise, and in spite of all talk I can say that there is nothing in the report of the Santa Fe system controlling our plans. We will build our road as rapidly as possible, no matter if we parallel another line. We feel convinced that the rival line to the Southern Pacific has caused the prosperity of Southern California, and feel that a similar road will do the same for San Francisco and this State. The Santa Fe may run over our line, for that is what it has done elsewhere. The line will certainly be built as soon as possible."

SAN CARLOS TROUBLES.

The Courts and Military Authorities at Bakersfield. PRESIDENT (Ariz.), Sept. 28.—[By the Associated Press.] Gov. Zulick has received the following dispatch from Maj.-Gen. Howard:

Gen. Miles reports Sheriff Fryer, of Pinal county, proposes arresting twenty-seven San Carlos Indians, and calls for military assistance. Please see to the matter before a stampede occurs and a terrible war is inaugurated. Gov. Zulick replied as follows: Maj.-Gen. Howard: I have no knowledge of the proposed arrest. If the Sheriff is armed with a legal process, and is directed to arrest San Carlos Indians on or off the reservation, he should be given all the necessary assistance. Indian criminals are amenable to the laws as any other criminals. The mandates of the court must be obeyed. Resistance to such authority constitutes an additional crime.

"C. MEYER ZULICK, Governor." SIX OF ESKIMUZIN'S HAND HELD. FLORENCE (Ariz.), Sept. 28.—Six Indians of Eskimuzin's band, arrested September 21st for resisting Sheriff Fryer in trying to serve warrants of arrest, were held by Justice Whiteside today, to await the action of the new bench of the Superior court. The Grand Jury meets next Monday. Sheriff Fryer has warrants for fourteen more Indians, seven for cattle stealing and seven for resisting him. The men wanted are now supposed to be on the San Carlos reservation.

Among the legacies is one of $3000 and a quantity of real estate to his brother Columbus Bartlett.

How the Kaiser Escaped. I had myself been in Berlin when both attacks were made upon the life of the Emperor—when Hoedle shot at him from the crowd, and Nobling from a window overlooking the celebrated street, Unter den Linden. A curious little incident occurred upon the latter occasion. As the Emperor was going to his afternoon drive in the Thiergarten, he asked an attendant standing in the hall of the palace why such an unusual and gayly dressed crowd thronged the streets.

"They go to see the Shah of Persia, your Majesty," was the answer. Ah, the Shah must put on a gala attire, the Emperor remarked, smiling, and forthwith took from a table his Prussian helmet, replacing with its steel plating the military cloth cap which he had before placed on his head.

When the Emperor returned, he was brought back to the palace, wounded and bleeding, the helmet was dented in several places where the mixed shot used by Nobling had struck against his head. The Emperor, the unresisting cloth heathen instead, who can tell how different the ending of the tragedy might have been?

Two or three days after the attempted assassination, the old monarch asked to see the clothes he had worn on that fatal day. Looking at the military cap, riddled with shot, and the dents in the eagle-capped helmet, he turned to those standing by his bedside, and with tears in his eyes, pointing to the marks of the bullets, "Thank God, it was not one of my own Berlin men who did that!"

Lower California.

Following is a picture of the country as given in the Anglo-American Times, published in London, England. "On investigation, it has been found that the lower half of Lower California is a finer country than even the southern part of California. It is lined along its whole length by the Pacific Ocean on one side and the large body of water that is known as the Gulf of California on the other, giving it a moister atmosphere, a more humid climate than either California to the north or Mexico to the east. Because Lower California is more water than the southern California, its land is more valuable in proportion to the quantity of water carried in streams to the sea. By going over the imaginary line which marks the entry into Mexico, a new country is discovered, possessing in places all the advantages of the most favored sites of Southern California. This opens to the settler of the day a chance of getting possession of land at a low figure, which can yield him an enormous return. We want our readers to be early in the field, at least those of them who are on the lookout for a new home. The choice cities of Southern California are few, and the price of the land has risen so high that only men of large means can pay. This may be relied on, that the country a few miles south of San Diego will grow precisely what is grown in Los Angeles, and all the difference that exists is said to be in favor of Lower California."

China Objects to Having Jay Gould's Finger Inserted in Her Pecuniary Affairs—Another Version of the French Frontier Affair—A Steamer Wrecked.

By Telegram to THE TIMES. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—[By the Associated Press.] Advances from Honolulu by the steamer, City of Sydney, from China and the Hawaiian Islands, arriving at 11 o'clock this morning, state that at the election held September 12th, all members of both Houses, with perhaps the exception of two Representatives in remote districts, were elected on the platform of the reform party, supporting the new Constitution and Ministry.

A MODEL ELECTION.

The Hawaiian Gazette of the 13th inst. has the following to say of the election in Honolulu:

"Election day passed off peacefully and with good order. The day was bright, the elements of nature being propitious to the reform movement. Excitement was intense, but not boisterous. Carriages began to run in all directions at an early hour, and a steady stream of voters soon began to flow in perfect order to each polling booth. Taken altogether, the city was as quiet as a Sunday afternoon, the only visible signs of the great struggle going on being in the immediate vicinity of the polling places. The counting of votes for Representatives in the Fifth Ward seemed to satisfy the Oppositionists that it was all up with them, and when, an hour later, as the numbers came in from other wards, word began to circulate through the streets that the solid reform ticket had made a clean sweep of the island, the O'Sullivan-Rossa candidates began to look sick. Soon after 1 o'clock the results were officially announced at the Pacific House company's building, and were received with prolonged cheering. A minute later the air was filled with rockets and roman candles. Bombs and fire-crackers went off at different parts of the city from time to time until after 10 o'clock. The reformers and anti-reformers retired to their homes to rest from the prolonged period of excitement and hard work for the good of Hawaii."

THE CONSTITUTION.

STATE SOVEREIGNTY AS UNDERSTOOD BY GEORGE T. CURTIS.

A Dual Government--The Line Fixed by the Tenth Amendment--Not Displaced Nor Diminished by the War--Secession Not a State Right.

(George Ticknor Curtis in Boston Journal.)

The anniversary at Philadelphia commemorating the framing and promulgation of the Constitution of the United States leads me to say something about the purposes of one of the amendments which were adopted in 1789, and which should be regarded as incorporated into and engrafted on the original Constitution. All of the first ten amendments were framed and proposed to the State Legislatures for ratification by the first Congress that sat under the Constitution, and in obedience to the public voice, which demanded further restrictions upon the power of so great a Government as that which the Constitution had established. The special topic which I purpose to treat within the limits of this paper is that suggested by

THE TENTH AMENDMENT.

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

It might have been said, in 1789, inasmuch as the Government created by the Constitution was a limited one, endowed with certain enumerated powers of a specific character, and as the prohibitions laid by the Constitution on the States were well defined, it was to be presumed that all other powers of government which the Constitution had not devolved on the Federal Government, and had not forbidden the States to exercise, remained with the States respectively, or with their people. But the people of the States which had ratified the Constitution did not choose to leave their State sovereignties to be protected only by implication. They required for those sovereignties an express security, and they obtained it by the tenth amendment. There has been some doubt respecting the precise meaning of the reservation "to the States respectively, or to the people." But to my mind the meaning is clear. I suppose that by the reservation to "the States" is to be understood all those powers which the people of those States respectively had bestowed on their State governments, and which the Federal Constitution had not taken away; and that by the reservation to "the people" was meant all that mass of sovereign powers which were inherent in the people of the several States, which they had not then bestowed upon their State governments, but could exercise when and as they saw fit, and which sovereign powers the Federal Constitution had not diminished. It is, then, to the true idea of State sovereignty under our mixed system of government that I now direct the attention of readers.

THE GOVERNMENT A DUAL ONE.

In the first place, it is to be observed that our system of Government is a dual one. It is a dual, inasmuch as it embraces both the federation and the national principle. The federation is constituted by a union of States, each of which is a separate political body; the national principle comes into force by reason of the creation of a limited sovereignty, constituted by the bestowal on a central Government of certain enumerated and defined powers. Our system is again dual because both Governments--that of the United States and that of each State--act upon individuals, but upon the same individuals in different relations. This peculiarity of our system, so difficult to be understood by most foreigners, by which every inhabitant of every State lives under two sovereignties, is perfectly familiar to us in its working; but it creates for us a necessity for drawing carefully the line between the powers of the General Government and the reserved powers of the States or their people, and it was the purpose of the tenth amendment to administer either the one Government or the other to observe this dividing line.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE WAR.

In the next place, the civil war through which we passed more than twenty years ago has not displaced or diminished the binding force of the tenth amendment. It remains just as true today as it was before the war that the whole mass of sovereign powers, which I understand to mean powers of government that the States have not devolved on the General Government, or covenanted that they will not exercise, remains with the States or the people. It can, therefore, with no propriety be said that there is no such thing as State sovereignty. There is a paramount sovereignty, which consists of all those powers of government which the Federal Constitution has devolved on the Federal Government. But the supremacy of the Federal Government is a supremacy in a certain sphere only, and there is another sphere in which each State is the supreme authority over its own inhabitants--in all those things in respect to which it has not covenanted with the United States that it will not exercise or attempt to exercise any power.

AMENDMENTS AFTER THE WAR.

In the third place those amendments which followed the war, and which are sometimes called the results of the war, have in no degree displaced or diminished the force and importance of the tenth amendment. They were mere eliminations of so much of the State sovereignties as they took away covenants by each State with all the others, that it would not do or undertake to do certain things which it had previously complete power to do. There was some complaint, and very justly that some of these amendments were forced upon the Southern States. Although during the "reconstruction" period things were done that savored of undue compulsion, those amendments were ratified, they have been universally acquiesced in, and they form a part of the Federal Constitution. Excepting in so far as they diminished the State sovereignties in certain particulars, they leave those sovereignties, in all other respects, just where they were. We came out of the turmoil of the "reconstruction" period better than might have been expected, for it was during some years doubtful what would become of the State sovereignties. The alternatives appeared to be to treat the Southern States as conquered countries and suppress their autonomy and restore them to the Union with all their moral rights and powers as members of the Union. Happily the good sense and the moderation of the North prevailed to make the latter course the one that was followed. This was greatly aided by what all sensible men could see was the only constitutional theory on which the Federal Government could be said to have prosecuted the war. That theory was that the Government of the United States had used its military power to put down all obstructions to the exercise of its constitutional authority in the States which had undertaken to secede from the Union.

SECESSION NOT A STATE RIGHT.

Lastly, the just and true idea of State sovereignty never comprehended the right of State secession from the Union as a right resulting from the nature of the Union. I am, of course, aware of the doctrine which deduced, from the nature of the Union and the terms of the Constitution, the supposed constitutional right of State secession. I can only express my conception of secession as a right of any kind by saying that there is always a right of revolution against the oppression of any Government, and that, physically, it was possible for great and powerful State Governments and a vigorous people to organize a formidable army for the purpose of making good their separation from the Union. But in all this proceeding I never could see any constitutional right resulting from the nature of our system of government. But the theory of the philosophy of State secession, although an interesting study in relation to the characters and conduct of important men and in relation to the motives and the sincerity of the Southern people, is now no longer of political consequence; first, because no man can foresee any possible circumstance in which it will ever be asserted again; and, secondly, because neither the fact that it was put down by an exercise of physical force after it had been referred to the dread arbitrament of war, nor the mode in which that force was exerted, has destroyed the true meaning or changed the character or diminished the scope of State sovereignties, excepting in so far as they have been diminished by an exercise of the process of amending the Constitution.

Social Depravity in India.

(New York Tribune.)

It appears from recently published statistics that there are seventy-one districts in India where social impurity is licensed and regulated as a "business" or a "trade." And it is an interesting fact that in all these districts Christianity is very weak. Thus in Bombay, a city of 644,405 inhabitants, only 4 per cent. of the natives are even professing Christians. In Benares, where Christian missionaries have worked so long and faithfully, out of a population of 175,188 there are less than 250 of the native citizens counted as Christians. In Jullunder the Presbyterians of the country have built a fine school, and have done faithful missionary work. And yet there are only seventy-seven Christians in Jullunder, out of a population of 56,067. Peshawar has a population of 55,555, of whom only seventeen are Christians. "These figures," says the Christian Commonwealth, "describe the condition of things in seats of uncleanness. Is it not obvious that what was too foul and hellish for perpetuation in England is destructive of all the moral edifice which we have been seeking to build up in British India? We seek to purge India of its idolatry with wonderful success in many districts. But in others the Christian government is surrounding our missionaries with sinks of bestial sensuality, and their civil officers and military men on furlough or retirement come home and sneer at the results of mission work in the presidencies of Hindostan."

The English Woman at Home.

(San Francisco Argonaut.)

The English girl has almost no social freedom. The wife has much within certain limits, not as extensive as are the continental limits, where a woman is never free until she is bound in the bonds of wedlock. English women are very submissive to the good man. But there is one field in which she is the sole monarch--namely, the field of society. An Englishman may not drag Tom, Dick or Harry home to dinner unless his wife be quite agreeable, and, in fact, give the invitation. He must take strangers to his club, but not to his domestic fireside, unless "the missus" shall so wish. And when she does so wish business matters are topics never discussed at dinner. In fact, to discuss a man's business life is always a breach of English etiquette.

A Ceylonese Auction Advertisement.

In a recent number of The Ceylon Government Gazette the following notice appeared signed by the inspector general of the police: "Notice is hereby given that the following unclaimed property will be sold by public auction at the Gampola police station, at 2 p.m. on Saturday May 14, 1887: Two knives, one piece of iron, one house-breaking implement, one brass water pot, one pair reins, one white jacket."

JEALOUS MINNEAPOLIS.

Not Entirely Happy About San Diego's Brass Band.
(Minneapolis Journal.)
Business men in San Diego, Cal., have given several thousand dollars to send their brass band to the Grand Army encampment at St. Louis. When the encampment is over the band will make a tour of the principal Eastern cities for the purpose of advertising San Diego.

This idea is strikingly unique. We have always had a notion that people up this way had a very definite opinion of the merits of their section, and were able to express that opinion in a great variety of emphatic ways. But this San Diego plan takes one's breath away. It is a breezy combination of aesthetic gratification and advertising enterprise. It will raise a storm of admiration in the sleepy East. These Californians are too restless to wait for the slow coming of ordinary appreciation. They prefer to blow their own horn. As they bang the big drum they will beat into the skulls of hard-headed capitalists, the gigantic profits in San Diego land. They will so charm their audiences that every note floating from the cornet will seem a bank-note to be picked from an orange grove. A California breeze, soft as a sigh of the tropics, will breathe gently from horn and piccolo, and sway on perfumed wings through the crowded hall. This breeze will not be redolent of garlic and Lombard cheese. Perish the thought! It will smell sweetly of California flowers. California musicians always eat flowers, and drink nothing but sunshine and dew (not mountain dew). Each member of the band will take a long breath before he leaves home. This will last him till he gets to San Diego again. California music would be harsh without California wind, and the members of the band are expressly selected for their elastic capacity to hold atmosphere. This Pacific Coast breeze they will proceed to blow all over the East. They will do a lot of blowing.

Can't a Western town live on anything but brag and wind in our own particular city we are always bragging. We are always careful to state the precise truth. We seldom talk about ourselves, anyway. But we do get rather wearied with the incessant boasting of some places.

Is not San Diego on the wrong track? It is merely proclaiming itself the cave of the winds. It is putting itself on a par with patent medicine and quack doctors. Is there no definite line between legitimate advertising and blatant puffery?

Once a frog tried to be an ox. He used the wind method, as San Diego is doing. The result was very unsatisfactory.

Rather Rough on St. John.

(Riverside Reporter.)
Riverside will shortly be visited by J. P. St. John, ex-Governor of Kansas. At the last Presidential election Gov. St. John was the prohibition candidate for the Chief Magistracy of the nation. Concerning Gov. St. John's individual character we have nothing to say, although it has been shown by indisputable evidence to be very checked and crooked. Of his public life, and more especially his connection with the last Presidential election, we purpose speaking.

When St. John failed to be elected Governor of Kansas for the third term—being defeated by the Democratic nominee, Glick—he was very violent against the Republican party, accusing it of treachery. He left the party which had conferred so many honors upon him, and warmly espoused the prohibition cause. Leading members of the party which he had abandoned say that St. John's championing of the prohibition cause was wholly due to revenge, and not to principle. Subsequent events fully corroborate this statement.

St. John's prominent connection with the Republican party in Kansas, followed by his eloquent denunciation of intemperance and his warm support of prohibition, made him conspicuous throughout the country. When the Prohibition National Convention assembled at Pittsburgh, Pa., St. John was tendered and accepted the Prohibition nomination for President. This is fresh in the minds of our readers.

St. John "stumped" some portions of the country for the great cause, which he had adopted through revenge, confining himself principally, however, to the great State of New York.

Toward the close, or at the end of the Presidential campaign, "Ret" Clark, son of the Des Moines (Iowa) Register, published column after column in that paper of documentary evidence proving that St. John received from the Democratic National Committee the sum of $50,000 for the work he had rendered the party by his prohibition speeches in New York State. The New York Tribune, in a long editorial, stated that John P. St. John defeated James G. Blaine for President, not through principle, but for Democratic money.

Gov. St. John is now in Southern California, advertising his advent by publishing in many papers in this section an electrolyte of himself accompanied by a biographical sketch. For the appearance of this electrolyte and sketch Gov. St. John is expending some of the $50,000 which he received from the Democratic party for work performed in New York State.

Now, we ask, in all candor, if such a man is worthy of public patronage as a lecturer? A man who will prostitute his abilities for money, as St. John has, is unworthy to champion a great and righteous cause, as Prohibition undoubtedly is, and is unworthy of public respect, much less public honor.

In the Bois de Boulogne.

(Lucy Hooper's Paris Letter.)
Here comes a tiny dog-cart, driven by a lady in the quietest of black toilets, and wearing a black soft felt hat with indented crown, ornamented with a single black quill feather set at one side. She has small, delicate features, a pointed chin, and small, black, sparkling eyes, a regular mouse face, but a pretty one without, though powdered so thickly as to appear of a corpse-like whiteness. This is the Marquis de Belbeuf, sister to the Duke de Morny, and lately separated from her husband. If half the stories that are whispered about her are true her adventures would furnish forth material for half a dozen novels. She looks quiet enough, however, both as regards her dress and her manners, and she is a most accomplished "whip," guiding her spirited, high-bred horse and small vehicle in a most capable way through the labyrinth of carriages. Next we pass a landau with two simply dressed ladies on the back seat, and on the front one a handsome gentleman in a gray suit who looks well satisfied with himself and with life in general. And he has every reason so to do, for the pleasant-faced young lady with the sweet, bright complexion that sits opposite to him is his bride of a fortnight, formerly Miss Helen de Rothschild, and he is Baron Van Zuylen, who has won and wedded the heiress of $12,000,000, despite all the opposition of the lady's relations. All honor to the girl who has loved the man she married and married the man she loved, and who scorned to buy a title or a few extra millions with her splendid dowry!

POISON IN HER TEA.

A PRIMA DONNA'S ADVENTURE IN VIENNA.

Emma Nevada's Strange Experience While Studying at the Austrian Capital—She Had Seen It All in a Dream and Refused the Poison.

(New York Mail and Express.)
 "When I first went to Europe," said Mrs. Nevada to a Mail reporter the other day, "I studied for three years in Vienna and for the first three months I boarded with a woman who took advantage of my inexperience to impose on me in every way possible; in fact, I paid a very high price and was almost starved. As I think of that place now it makes me shudder. The mother was a perfect old hag, who went about the house in a ragged old petticoat with her back hair tumbling down over her face and shoulders in an untidy mass and a pair of little rat's eyes peeping out at you from among the yellow wrinkles. Really, the things that used to take place in that family are incredible. There were two grown-up daughters, and I would sometimes enter the parlor and find one of them sitting quietly under the piano, doing nothing apparently, and often I would be awakened at night by strange sounds, screams, men's voices, threats and oaths. I was only 15 years old at the time and was too timid or unselfish to say anything about this, but the worst thing of all was the food which they gave me. There was only one kind of meat, and that I had never been able to eat. It was pork. I was ashamed to complain, but would cover the piece on my plate with potatoes or bread, and leave the table almost famished. This went on for some weeks, until finally I became so pale and weak that my teacher noticed the change and asked me about it.

"I told him how it was, and he said I must go home at once and order proper food. Well, at last, one day I said to the servant that I had to sing at a concert that night, and wished her to cook some beefsteak and bring it to my room. The old lady happened to be absent at the time, so I succeeded in getting the steak, and I assure you I ate it ravenously. Then I started off for the concert, congratulating myself on having managed the thing so well. However, I no sooner entered the house than the old woman came hobbling up to me, seized me by the arm, forced me into a corner, and commenced abusing and insulting me in the most abominable way. I was so terrified that I forgot my timidity and managed in some way to tear myself from her, and to rush to my room, where I bolted the door, and then sank down on the floor in hysterics. Finally I grew calmer and began to think out what I had better do. It was already past midnight, but I commenced packing up my things in the morning, and I fell asleep from sheer exhaustion and I dreamed that I saw the old hag standing by the stove in the kitchen making some tea. I followed each one of her movements and at last saw her fill a cup from the teapot, and carry this in her hand to the cupboard. She reached up to a high shelf and took down a bottle marked 'poison,' from which she poured a few drops into the cup. Then she put the bottle away carefully and came up to my room, carrying the tea, and knocked at the door.

"The dream realized.
 "At this point I awoke with an awful fright and at once looked at my clock. It was just 6 and the day was breaking. I arose, bathed my face, and was about to resume my packing when there came a knocking at my door. I asked who was there, and a high piercing voice, which I recognized only too well, replied: 'It is I, my dear; I have brought you a nice cup of tea. Open the door.' It is needless to say that I did not do it. She continued knocking and begged me to let her in, but, of course, I refused. Then she threatened me and poured out the foulest language I ever heard, and at last she came back to persuasion, saying, and I can never forget her words: 'I am here on my knees like a dog, and I implore you only to taste this tea which I have for you.'

"You can imagine what a state I was in by this time. I was perfectly desperate, and, after waiting for two or three hours listening and hardly daring to breathe, I cautiously opened my door and made a rush for the street. There were three flights of stairs to descend, and at the bottom of the second one I met the old woman, glaring at me like a fiend. I do not know how I ever did it, but in some way I was given the strength to push her out of my way, and I escaped, leaving her stretched at full length on the floor."

"And what happened after that?" I asked.
 "Oh, I simply got an officer to go there and carry off my things. Of course, I had no interest in getting the woman in prison or anything of that sort; but don't you call that a case of supernatural warning?"

THE RAILROADS.

COHEN'S IDEAS OF THE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

He Thinks the Commissioners Should Defer to the Views of Directors and Managers of Railroads—Earnings of the Southern Pacific.

[San Francisco Bulletin.] Alfred A. Cohen, counsel for the Central Pacific Railroad, says concerning the Pacific Railroad Commission: "I think it was the intention of the President when he approved the bill authorizing this commission and appointed its members, that they should obtain the views of the directors and managers of the railroads as to the most favorable measure of arranging and settling the indebtedness due the Government, but the efforts of the majority of the commission appear to have been confined to preferring charges of misconduct. All benefit that could possibly have been derived from the appointment of this commission was the producing of such a result, namely, the settling of the railroad indebtedness and removal of its officials beyond political influence. Such may be the ultimate effect, but I do not think, if it is, that it will be due in any way to the intelligent manner in which the Commissioners have so far performed the duties assigned to them. They have spent two days in an effort to annoy C. P. Huntington in reference to the altered copies of letters that he says contained garbled statements of what he wrote to a poor director, now dead. These letters were removed without authority from the office of the Central Pacific. Now, if this time had been devoted by the commission to a review of the tariff on aided roads to ascertain its source and the possibility of its improvement, and to inquire whether the business of any other territory could be made tributary to it, this would have been very much more to the interests of the Government."

HUNTINGTON'S SCHEME FOR SETTLEMENT.

Mr. Huntington said if he could have a month of uninterrupted work in his library he could prepare a scheme of settlement between the road and the Government, which would succeed if the Government would keep faith.

On Lawyer Cohen's suggestion, the Commission invited Mr. Huntington to formulate his scheme, but stipulated that it must be presented within fifteen days. Mr. Huntington agreed to undertake the task. Mr. Huntington said he and Mr. Hopkins were worth between $600,000 and $700,000 at the time the construction of the Central Pacific road was undertaken, and had a credit amounting to a million. The house of Stanford Bros. was worth several hundred thousand dollars. Huntington said that they didn't have money enough to build the road or they would have done it. Huntington said he thought at the time the Government aid was extended, the work the Government would want done would pay the system known as the United States. The Government, however, never did what it promised. It did not protect the building of the road against the Indians, and 175 of the company's men were killed at Big Meadows.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

The annual report of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has just been issued. It shows the operations for the year ending December 31, 1886, and contains some very interesting figures and statements of earnings.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company, as distinguished from the Southern Pacific of Kentucky, the report of which was spoken of at length lately, includes the system known as the Northern division, running from San Francisco to Tres Pinos, also from Camadero to San Miguel. It also includes the lines running from Huron via Goshen to the Colorado River, the Los Angeles and San Pedro line, and also the Mojave-Nevada line. The total mileage, including leased lines, is 1071.32, of which 820 miles are operated by the Southern Pacific Company, and 242 by the Atlantic and Pacific. The report is given by the president of the company, Charles Crocker. He goes on to state that the reports of operations furnished by the Southern Pacific Company lessees show a steady increase in the business.

The earnings were as follows: For 1886—Gross earnings Northern division, $1,649,824.33; less operating expenses, $887,859.32; balance, $761,965.01; gross earnings Southern division, $2,294,131.49; less operating expenses, $2,226,157.10; balance, $1,067,974.39; earnings over operating expenses, $1,879,939.39. For 1885—Gross earnings Northern division, $1,281,762.96; less operating expenses, $788,912.51; balance, $492,850.45; gross earnings Southern division, $3,174,743.64; less operating expenses, $1,721,514.41; balance, $1,453,229.23; earnings over operating expenses, $1,953,079.68.

"It will be observed," continues the report, "that the earnings of the Northern division show an increase over those of the previous year of upward of 25 per cent., while the earnings of the Southern division, owing to its participation in the transcontinental rate war, which was in force the greater part of the year, show but a little increase for the large volume of traffic over this line during that period. By the terms of the lease of March 1, 1885, the Southern Pacific lessee is required to pay the interest on the bonded indebtedness of this company, the current taxes upon its road and the cost of all disbursements. During the last year the disbursements made by the lessee for these accounts have absorbed the excess of earnings above shown. The receipts above shown are exclusive of the rental of the Colorado division under lease to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, from which $436,266 is received."

The capital stock of the company is $30,000,000, of which $45,044,800 has been paid in. The indebtedness is as follows: Funded debt, as per statement No. 5, $33,303,000; trustees of mortgage, $340,530.20; reserve for payment of taxes in litigation, $70,379.66; bills and accounts payable, $36,017.52; total indebtedness, $33,749,927.38. The total assets of the company, including railroads, telegraph lines, rolling stock, and equipments are as follows:

Interest in sixty acres of land in Mission Bay, $303,537,373.06. The above estimate does not include the value of lands owned by the company. The land office business for the year far exceeded that of any previous year, the sales reaching upward of 1,700,000 acres. During the year sixty-five and a half miles of new road were built and $1,900,000 of bonds issued. Bonds to the amount of $817,000 were redeemed from proceeds of land sales, and $940,000 remained in the hands of the trustees for further redemption of bonds. The report concludes as follows: "Notwithstanding a large increase in business, the continued rivalry of competing transcontinental lines has caused a considerable loss of revenue to the company from the extremely low rates which have been necessarily adopted, coupled with an increase in operating expenses consequent upon the large volume of traffic. Yet, as there seldom is a loss without a gain, the Southern Pacific has the satisfaction of knowing not only that it has maintained its position in the contest for transcontinental traffic, but that it will hereafter reap the benefits to accrue from the number of people who have been pouring into our State the last year through the prevailing low rates of fare. Many of these new arrivals have come with the intention of remaining permanently in our State, and with capital, intelligence and enterprise will doubtless establish themselves in the many industries open to them and so contribute to the development of new business to the ultimate benefit of our road."

THE MOST PRACTICAL! THE MOST RELIABLE

Everybody should have a copy of our "FAMILY PHYSICIAN."

Please read these indorsements of distinguished physicians which were sent to the publishers of this grand work:

Having examined the advance sheets of the work entitled "Our Family Physician," I can say that I find it accurate in its descriptions of diseases and reliable in its therapeutical department. N. F. COOKE, M.D., Professor of theory and practice, Hahnemann Medical College.

I hereby certify that I have examined a work entitled "Our Family Physician," and find it to be correct in its diagnosis, and, in my opinion, worthy of the confidence of the public. H. S. HANN, M.D.

I have examined the advance sheets of "Our Family Physician." It gives me pleasure to recommend the work as correct in its mode of treatment of diseases, and it deserves wide circulation. J. F. COOKE, M.D., Professor in Burnett's Medical College, Chicago.

After examining the publication "Our Family Physician," I can fully indorse the opinions expressed of its merits by the above gentlemen. R. A. GUNN, M.D., Professor of the Burnett Medical College.

The book contains a valuable chapter of symptoms, which will aid wonderfully in diagnosing diseases, and the proper remedies are given for Allopathic, Homeopathic, Eclectic, Hydropathic and Herbal.

This book contains 544 pages; is eight and one-half inches long, six inches wide and two inches thick. It is printed on extra heavy paper and is handsomely bound, with embossed cover and gilt-lettered back.

IT IS DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHER WORKS OF THE KIND EVER PUBLISHED.

FIRST—It teaches those who have it how to tell what the matter is when one gets sick. All similar books tell what to do—if you know what the disease is. THIS BOOK TELLS YOU HOW TO RECOGNIZE THE DISEASE, and then what to do for it. No other book published does this.

SECOND—When a person is really attacked by a dangerous disease, it enables you to know the fact, and in such cases its advice is, "Send for a competent physician at once." In all ordinary cases, such as can be cured without a doctor (and most of the ailments in a family are of this kind, if only you could recognize them), it gives full directions for treatment. The point is, that it teaches you the difference between a dangerous and a trifling disease and tells you when it is necessary and when it is not necessary to call a physician. No other book published does this.

THIRD—It gives separately, and for each disease, the methods used by each of the different "schools of medicine," and in all cases the prescriptions are made by the most eminent men in their respective mode of practice. This makes the work specially suited to the needs of every family, no matter what school of medicine they prefer—the Allopathic, Homeopathic, Hydropathic, Eclectic or Herbal. NO OTHER BOOK PUBLISHED DOES THIS.

WE WILL SHOW YOU HOW IT DOES THIS

If you will call and see us.

Every family should have a guide to health to assist the family doctor.

not intended to take the place of the doctor in every instance, but to help you do everything possible in his absence.

---TO OUR OLD SUBSCRIBERS---

It is customary with newspapers to give premiums to new subscribers only; but the publishers of the MIRROR mean to reverse this old rule; they intend to do as well, at least, by their old subscribers—those who have stood by the paper in years past, and paid their money for it "right straight along." We propose to show our appreciation of these friends in a substantial manner; and as the premium to be offered is expensive, and as our express object in offering it is to increase our list of subscribers, we will require every old subscriber who may renew his subscription, in order to receive the valuable premium, to bring in AT LEAST ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER, to whom the premium will be given, as well as to the old subscriber.
